Re: The Metropolitan

To Whom It May Concern:

It was a pleasure working with Paramount Contracting, Inc. on The Metropolitan project, a 12-story student apartment building in downtown State College, PA. Because of design, weather, and structural delays, the framing and drywall work started months later than anticipated, and once it did start, it was rarely able to proceed at full efficiency. In spite of these issues, Paramount rose to the occasion and performed at the highest level in order to help bring the project in on time.

The most impressive aspect of Paramount's performance wasn't their increased manpower and production – it was their active involvement in the coordination and execution of the project from a global perspective. By its very nature, framing and drywall contractors interface with almost all of the other contractors on a project. When Paramount saw an opportunity to raise a red flag or make an adjustment that could improve the entire team's performance, they spoke up, even when it wasn't the best thing for them directly. This active engagement in the process and team-first mentality goes far beyond the industry standard and is what truly sets Paramount apart from their competition.

The Metropolitan was a very challenging project that could have went south, but because of contractors like Paramount, it instead turned out to be one of the most rewarding of my career. I truly appreciate their efforts on this project, and look forward to working with them again in the future.

Sincerely,
